1. Introduction

This assignment is the first stage of my semester project: an e-commerce website modelled on an existing online store. In this stage I built the static, responsive front end only. There is no JavaScript logic yet. The work focuses on page structure, styling and making the layout adapt to phone, tablet and desktop screens.

Pages built

- index.html: homepage with a header, navbar, hero banner, a responsive grid of 8 product cards, a "Why Choose Us" section and a footer.
- product.html: product detail page with a large image, name, price, description, quantity selector and an "Add to Cart" button.
- css/style.css: my own custom styles and media queries.
- README.md: reference site details and project notes.

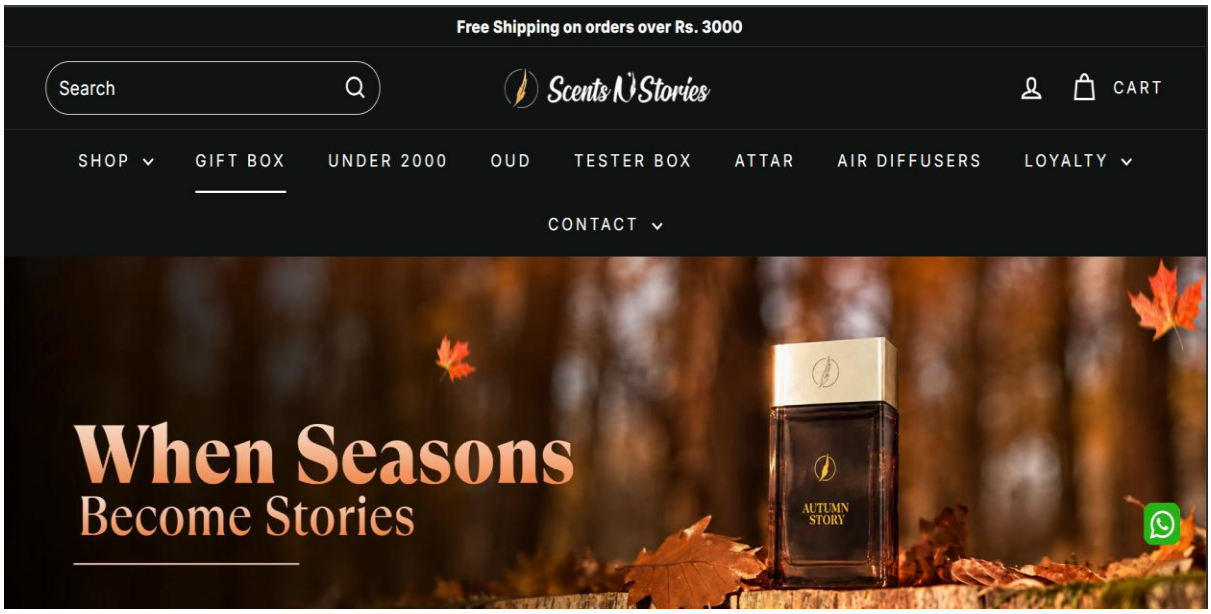

Tools used

- HTML5 for page structure, using semantic tags such as header, nav, main, section and footer.
- CSS3 for custom styling and media queries.
- Bootstrap 5 (loaded from a CDN) for the navbar and the responsive grid.
- Visual Studio Code with the Live Server extension, and Git/GitHub for version control.
